

This is the story synopsis I would like to have on the back cover:

American has fallen victim to the strong arm of the federal government, as Presidential executive orders have become the primary law of the land. The borders have remained open and unchecked, and mass immigration has flooded the west and east coasts. Select minority groups are granted preferential status, and political dissenters have found themselves incarcerated in federal reeducation camps. To alleviate overcrowding on the coasts, the President has authored the Property Reallocation Doctrine, to begin seizing private property from the citizens of the Middle States and grant it to the immigrants. At least one American Patriot has a plan to fight back, a plan that risks everything. Follow this thriller as Colonel Tuxhorn and his squadron engage in a heart pounding mission to take back America. Feel the struggle to survive as citizens of the Middle States risk it all to fight for the liberties they once enjoyed.

The following image represents a Middle States flag that I drew up, the same flag that the farm owner would be raising under the American flag on the front cover. BY NO MEANS DO I NEED TO HAVE THIS ENTIRE FLAG VISIBLE ON THE FRONT COVER. I'm simply sharing it so the artist can perhaps show a sliver of it as it's being raised on the flag pole. That being said, perhaps it can shown in it's entirety on the back cover? Either this flag or one better designed as the artists see's fit.
