The BOLDA story dates back to the American Prohibition. My grandfather Vittorio Testolin was a steelworker in Boulder Hill, Chicago. He went there to work and send money back to his family in Calvene, Italy. During his visits back to Italy, he would be asked where he worked. Boulder Hill was quickly Italianised to Bolda, which became the family's nickname.

Calvene lies in the Northern part of Italy, near Bassano del Grappa, an area known for its rugged terrain, heavy snow, great food and grappa.

In his spare time, Vittorio would use scrap metal from the steelworks to make moonshine stills for his relatives and friends.

I use traditional techniques together with a modern, computerised still to make the BOLDA spirits in honour of my grandfather.
