

TWIN

Jack and Tul are twins separated at birth by dark monks seeking child sacrifices to break down the Weave that separates hell from the world. Tul is taken to the great Monastery of Saint Bernard, set in the mighty snow-covered mountains of northern Ganya to be raised a novice monk, an orphan with no knowledge of his background. Jack grows up in the wilderness of southern Ganya with his two sisters and father.

Tul stumbles across a prophecy in the monastery library which reveals that a set of twins will be the saviors of Ganya, reversing the chaos that is being unleashed by the blood sacrifice. When they also discover the prophecy, the monks unleash their draugr creatures to find the twins and kill them. Little do they know that one of the twins is under their very noses.

The twins flee, pursued by the draugr and evil monks. If only they can find each other they might make sense of the increasing chaos that now surrounds them. But, in a world where the separation of good and evil is rapidly fragmenting, Tul and Jack soon find out that no one is really who they seem to be – including themselves!

Twin is a rich and gripping story of action and adventure, isolation and the strength of family, and the choice between good and evil. Maybe it's not a fantasy after all ...

BOOK
ONE

TWIN

HOWARD GURNEY

TWIN

BOOK ONE
OF THE PATH TO CHAOS

HOWARD GURNEY

