

Architects Of Nothingness

(music & lyrics by frozenroom)

In the city of grey where the sidewalks meet the sky
Where all the love and passion's gone – no goodbye
The clocks are ticking slowly, in this city full of routine
Each day is like the day before, and colors remain unseen

In the heart of the young spirit, a rumor starts to rise
That the architects of nothingness, in a world so black and white
Are yearning for a symphony where dreams and colors blend
Imagine a new beginning and the old world to end

In the shadows of the buildings where echoes never cease
There's a rebel with a heartbeat searching for release
The chains are finally breaking, hear the freedom ring
The anthem of rebellion – together we all sing

In the heart of the young spirit, a rumor starts to rise
That the architects of nothingness, in a world so black and white
Are yearning for a symphony where dreams and colors blend
Imagine a new beginning and the old world to end

In the heart of the young spirit, a whisper starts to rise
From the architects of nothingness, in a world so black and white
They long to hear a symphony where dreams and colors blend
Imagine a new beginning and the old world to end