

Dr. Corey Solman, MD is Board Certified in Orthopedic Surgery and Sports Medicine. Dr. Solman's practice focuses on the surgical and non-surgical treatments of Sports Medicine and General Orthopedic conditions, with an emphasis on surgery of the shoulder. Dr. Solman utilizes the most advanced surgical and non-surgical techniques in order to help patients return to work, and a more active life.

Dr. Solman received his Doctorate of Medicine from Tufts University Medical School in Boston, Massachusetts. Following Medical School, Dr. Solman completed the prestigious Sports Medicine and Arthroscopy with Dr. Mike Pagnani in Nashville, Tennessee. During his fellowship Dr. Solman, gained extensive experience by caring for the Nashville Predators, Nashville Kats, and numerous other collegiate and professional athletes. In 2002, Dr. Solman relocated to St. Louis in order to establish his personal practice. Since that time, Dr. Solman has served as the Head Team Physician for several local high schools, and professional sports teams.

When not caring for patients and athletes, or perfecting his craft, Dr. Solman can be found enjoying his passions for fishing and making music.

Dr. Solman specializes in the comprehensive care of work related injuries and trauma to the knee, shoulder, elbow, hip, foot and ankle. Dr. Solman applies the same passion for treating athletes to treating the injured worker, with the single goal of helping them get back to work.