

“Come on in. Have a seat.”

In these pages you will be transported to Martin Luther's home. You will sit with him at his kitchen table as he reveals the unexpected twists and turns that took place in his life. His wife will visit with you briefly, but for a reason you might not expect.

In the end, this book may not be about Luther at all!
You decide.

“The first-person narrative style of this book will especially appeal to children. The full color original photographs will capture their attention and bring the stories to life. This book makes an excellent classroom textbook but it will easily appeal to the adult reader looking to deepen their understanding about the life of Luther.”

-Mr. Daniel Feuerstahler,     retired Lutheran Grade School Teacher and Principal
(WELS)

"I loved the way in which the author wrote the book in the first person. It was as if Martin Luther himself were telling me his story and explaining the struggle which engulfed him and the Church during the time of the Reformation. The story telling and vocabulary make this an excellent source for teaching children and adults about the life of Luther. The wonderful color photography places you in Germany. My wish is to share a copy of this fascinating book with every member in my congregations."
