

I didn't see that coming by Barry Jacoby

The cover page is for the second book in a series of books of short stories, all with an unexpected twist at the end.

The book cover is to show a good looking, well-built man in his thirties with black curly hair and very sure of himself. He is at an art gallery looking at pictures of the Old Masters or Classical style of paintings – as shown below, not modern paintings.

He sees what he thinks could be a painting of the Grand Canal, in Venice by Canaletto (similar to the one shown below as he painted many pictures of this scene, some real and some imaginary), amongst the other paintings. If the book cover shows one painting, it needs to be a painting of the Grand Canal. If there are many paintings in the art gallery, they need to be Old Masters or classical art, but it is not essential to have a painting of the Grand Canal included.

The book is called “I didn't see that coming”, and is written by Barry Jacoby. Please use the same font and style for the title, author and description as per book one - see attachment. Also include the text: Short stories about love, revenge, unusual events, life, and other things, all with surprise endings.

The cover needs to be bright, interesting and inviting so that people want to pick up and read the book.

NOTE: All the pictures above are from the internet and cannot be used on the cover unless you can get permission to do so. They are to give you an idea of the type of elements the cover should show.

The book is 290 pages size 13 x 19.4 cm. TO be printed through Amazon Kindle.

The back of the cover blurb is:

This collection of 26 short stories, all with a surprise ending, are in some cases based on real incidents and real people.

The author, Barry Jacoby is a retired lawyer and keen amateur archaeologist who is an active member of a branch of the Archaeological Society of South Africa. He lives on a country small holding near Krugersdorp with his wife Marion and seven dogs. A former passionate Scuba diver and instructor at the Dobermann club his current interests include, travelling, oriental antiques, growing bonsai, and short story writing. He has three daughters and two grandchildren.

From murder, betrayal, revenge and terrorism to humor, legal and science fiction stories this book should delight those who want something different.

ISBN: 9781731315809