OCEG is a 501(c)3 nonprofit that provides standards, guidelines, tools and online resources to address governance, risk management, compliance and ethics

Being part of the OCEG Network provides access to guidelines, standards, tools, resources, events and the ability to participate in the process

an overview of membership

OCEG members and development partners are the engine behind OCEG's success. Both of these groups are critical to the development, distribution and use of guidelines and standards. Individuals and organizations of all types and sizes can get involved in OCEG in an number of ways.

membership levels

Founding Members help fund the initial development effort of the OCEG initiative.

Leadership Council Members are asked by annual invitation to provide overall leadership for the OCEG initiative. Leadership Council Members enjoy the highest level of benefits and access to OCEG resources.

Technology Council Members are asked by annual invitation to provide leadership for developing technical and data interoperability standards.

Organizational Subscribers can access all published and online resources including guidelines, standards, tools, examples and benchmarking. Organizational Subscribers receive a number of user logins so that several individuals can participate in any number of working groups.

Individual Members can access some of the published and online resources. Individual members can also participate in up to 3 working groups.

Affiliate Organizations are other nonprofits with complementary missions / visions. OCEG and Affiliate Organizations provide benefits and discounts to each other's members.

development partners

Business Editors are organizations or individuals asked by annual invitation to co-chair Working Groups that develop guidelines and standards in particular subject areas. Business Editors ensure that these supplements incorporate common and best business practices.
