

Who has your best interest?

According to the American Association of School Administrators, our K12 education system has over $200 billion of annual spending power. Of that amount, an estimated $8 billion is spent by educators on products and services with the hope of an output that produces positive results for children. But with that come thousands of for-profit and not-for-profit providers that market thousands of learning solutions to administrators, superintendents, and principals who make these buying decisions. The estimated 3 million teachers are left to wonder where these solutions come from, whether they are the best for their learners, and whether, ultimately, they will make a difference to teaching and learning.

NS4ed takes apart the provider-led reviews and long drawn out process of selecting a program solution and puts you in the drivers seat. From cultural scan to educator and community surveys, we help you make an informed, independent review and selection that's right for your students, teachers and administrators.

Let NS4ed help you make informed buying decisions.
