

Set in the main street, each year the Cook Off transforms the sleepy town of Blinman (pop. 22) in the northern Flinders Ranges into South Australia's largest camp oven cooking competition. Everyone has a chance to win cash and prizes with their cooking skills - or by entering the novelty events.

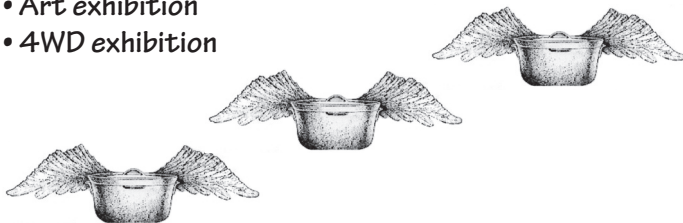

With food and wine stalls, celebrity judging, along with bush music, art exhibitions, poetry and story telling, this is a truly Aussie event.

And there's a genuine Aussie bush pub right in the middle of it all.

Set among the wild flowers and wild life, this unique event is not only for competitors but for the whole family to enjoy! With visitor numbers anticipated to be around the 2,000 mark, this little town is set to sizzle! This year's judging panel, made up of local identities and celebrity judges will again have their work cut out for them.

And if that's not enough fun, Saturday night is the time for the Outback Street Party on the main road right outside the pub, featuring live music and entertainment late into the night, under countless millions of outback stars.

IS THAT A JUMBUCK IN YOUR TUCKERBAG?

Competitors are given a TUCKER BAG containing a leg of lamb (JUMBUCK) plus carrots, potatoes and onions as well as a bag of plain flour.

During the two day event, each Cook Out Back team must present one plated dish at the end of each day for judging, using the ingredients provided in the TUCKER BAG.

Everything must be cooked in a Camp Oven or Bedourie (camp ovens are cast iron while a bedourie is made from pressed steel). You are permitted to bring extra ingredients - spices, herbs etc.

The judges will also be considering site presentation and team member's demeanour throughout the event.
