

A disgraced former agent.
A ruthless killer in agency clothes.
A family man who stands to lose everything.

When Molokai Rhulen left the field for the safety of a desk job at Langley, he didn't realise his most important mission was yet to come. When one of their own, retired commander Bruce Dusell, is found dead in a strange torture device recovered from the Vietnam war, it spurs an off the books investigation by Molokai and an agency exile by the name of Dellan Marks.

As the CIA assembles a team of its own, former Harvard graduate Stenton is ordered to dig into Bruce's past and quickly uncovers the true origins of the torture device hauled from the tunnels in Vietnam.

When strings start leading back to the peculiar associate Director Hoffstrom and his malevolent conspirator, Burke, Molokai and Dellan are forced to muster every agent they can to protect one another and reach the bottom of a case that is far from black and white.

Wanting to spend more time with his wife Isabelle and son Billy, Molokai is torn between helping find Bruce's killers and keeping his family out of danger.

Nicholas Brookland

NO REST FOR THE WEARY

Nicholas Brookland is a freelance writer, novelist and film reviewer. He is also a member of the New Zealand Writers Guild and Kiwi Writers.

