

Moving is hard enough.

Updating your address, unpacking boxes and meeting the new neighbors. The last thing you need to worry about on moving day is insurance.

Renters need insurance too.

Even if you don't own the place where you live, you need protection against fire, theft and vandalism. There are many misconceptions about rental insurance, including:

My landlord has coverage, so I don't need it.

Even if your landlord has insurance, it may not cover certain types of damage or your personal possessions.

Insurance is expensive.

Depending on your coverage, protection can be less than a dollar per day. Mavum has relationships with a variety of carriers to offer you the right protection at the right price.

I live in a safe area – security isn't a concern.

Renter's insurance protects more than your possessions. If your suitcase is stolen while you're on vacation, or if someone falls in your kitchen, certain types of renter's coverage can protect you.

My stuff won't be that expensive, if I need to replace it.

Your pile of clothes, used mp3 player and well-read books can add up quickly. We offer a variety of tools to calculate the replacement costs of your possessions.
