Sample text

Didot is a name given to a group of typefaces named after the famous French printing and type producing family. The classification is known as modern, or Didone.

About the typeface

The typeface we know today was based on a collection of related types developed in the period 1784–1811. Firmin Didot (1764–1836) cut the letters, and cast them as type in Paris. The typeface takes inspiration from John Baskerville's experimentation with increasing stroke contrast and a more condensed armature. The Didot family's development of a high contrast typeface with an increased stress is contemporary to similar faces developed by Giambattista Bodoni in Italy. Didot is described as neoclassical, and is evocative of the Age of Enlightenment.

Dear Russell,

We're pleased to announce that Dr. Eric Malthouse, acclaimed as a daring interpreter of the works of Widor, will soon be visiting Collingwood. Dr. Malthouse is a 2001 graduate of the Paris Conservatoire and at present teaches privately in Centerville.

We have scheduled a recital and a master's class by Dr. Malthouse, to be held on August 14 and 15 respectively, and encourage all Organ Guild members to attend. Details of time and location are pending but will be announced in our July meeting.

Since Dr. Malthouse has specialized experience in keyboard instruction for children, we especially encourage teachers of younger musicians to attend his master's class, where he will demonstrate many of his highly effective pedagogical approaches. In keeping with the tradition of all past guild events, we anticipate that Dr. Malthouse's visit will be a musically rewarding experience for all our members. Make plans now to join with Dr. Malthouse in August!
